

We use the term “nominal” to reflect the fact that in most cases clear imagery for the late-summer index period (late July to mid-September) that was used for the mapping was not available for the entire state. Imagery from the previous or subsequent year(s) was used for areas lacking clear imagery in the nominal year. For example, in the 1990 census, we used imagery acquired between 1990 and 1992.